

DATIVE VERBS

absagen to cancel
antworten to answer
begegnen to encounter
danken to thank
drohen to threaten
einfallen to have an idea
entgegenkommen to approach
fehlen to miss
folgen to follow
gefallen to appeal
gehen to be (e.g. fine)
gehören to belong
gelingen to accomplish
genügen to suffice
glauben to believe
gratulieren to congratulate
gut tun to do good
helfen to help
kalt/warm sein to be cold/warm
leid tun to be sorry
sich nähern to approach
nachlaufen to run after
nützen to avail
passen to suit/fit
passieren to happen
raten to recommend
schaden to do harm
schmecken to taste
stehen to suit (e.g. clothing)
vertrauen to trust
verzeihen/vergeben to forgive
weh tun to hurt
widersprechen to contradict
zuhören to listen
zusehen to watch
zustimmen to agree

MEMORY SENTENCES

Dracula cancels your appointment.
The diplomat just doesn't answer.
I have encountered Donald Duck.
I thank Dracula for my eternal life.
The director threatens with dismissal.
Dracula has a dumb idea.
A Dino is approaching me.
Dracula is missing two teeth.
The dachshound follows the badger.
The steamroller appeals to Donald.
The dictator is fine.
The tiara belongs to Lady Diana.
The design was accomplished.
The drugs didn't suffice the thief.
The detective doesn't believe the thief.
The director congratulated the diva.
Diarrhea doesn't do Dracula good.
The deodorant helped the Danish dandy.
The dame was cold.
The despot was sorry.
The thief approaches the depot.
The dog runs after the dandy.
The dynamite will avail dracula nothing.
The diadem suited Diana perfectly.
A disaster happened to the DJ.
The diplomat recommends full disclosure of all documents.
Drama doesn't do a diamond any harm.
Drugs just don't taste good.
The designer suit suits the big Danish man.
I don't trust my dealer.
The docent forgives her ignorance.
The dragon is hurting the dodo.
Never contradict your dominatrix.
The dog listens to the diva.
I could watch the dolphins forever.
The delegation agreed to the deal.